General Information

September 1955—September 1956

All quotations in this catalogue are f.o.b. Brooks. Unless stipulated otherwise, shipments will be sent parcel post c.o.d. We make special effort to plan their arrival so as to avoid any possible weekend or holiday delay. Remember our 10% REDUCTION ON ORDERS OF $10.00 OR MORE.

Cash with those orders to be shipped immediately, and 20% of purchase amount will be required to reserve plants for later delivery.

All liners will be shipped in May and June. All camellias, azaleas, rhododendrons, and other shrubs larger than liner size will be sent immediately upon receiving order.

Sizes quoted in camellias refer to height of plant—in azaleas they refer to spread of plant. Rhododendrons and Mollis azaleas are graded according to height and corresponding spread.

Sizes and prices of any specific varieties in larger stock than listed will gladly be quoted upon request.

May we remind you to plant camellias, rhododendrons, and azaleas only as deep as grown in the nursery. Addition of moisture-saving peat moss, deep watering during summer months, fertilizer after blossoming season, hand cultivation only, are suggestions to those unfamiliar with the growing of these plants.

Plant liners in a shady spot using a good peat mixture and water freely during summer. By fall they can be moved to your desirable location.

Complete cultural directions enclosed with every order.

New Evergreen Azaleas

Of recent introduction, these Glenn Dale and Gable hybrid evergreen azaleas promise new pleasure for azalea gardeners. Among the varieties are those of exceptionally large and varied flowers and unusual colorings. They blossom long and freely. Mainly they tend to be strong, vigorous growers with eventual heights and spreads rivaling many of our rhododendrons. The number of these new hybrids is staggering; and many, particularly among the pinks, will be somewhat similar. We are growing a good representative selection; and soon through further patient addition and elimination, we will offer you the best all-round performers in flower, foliage, and habit of growth. We hope you will share our enthusiasm for them.

Best of all is their sub-zero hardiness. They are an outgrowth of extensive experimenting on the east coast to produce a winter hardiness heretofore unknown among evergreen azaleas. We grew our first stock during the record winter of 14 below zero without damage to leaf or bud. An occasional variety will show some leaf shed during the winter which by spring is unnoticeable. Mature plants of the Gable hybrids reportedly can withstand 20 below zero and more; the Glenn Dales perhaps from 5 to 15 below zero or more.

Exbury Mollis Azaleas

Several seasons back Mr. John Henny imported a selection of named hybrid clonal plants of a new race of deciduous azaleas. These are the exciting new Mollis azaleas, improved beyond all belief in size and color, direct from the hybridizer, the Rothchild gardens at Exbury in England.

Colors we have not seen in mollis azaleas before—pure white, shades of pink, striking reds, and strong yellows and orange. The petals are broad and flat, forming a large flower; the size varying with variety but averaging about 4 inches. These form a truss like our rhododendrons that offers an unparalleled splash of color about two weeks later than our usual mollis types. The blossoms tend to increase in size as the plant matures.

In the fall the foliage assumes the brilliant autumn tints of red and yellow. Completely winter hardy and may be planted in partial shade or full sun.

We are pleased to offer selected seedlings of these clonal named varieties.

Azalea Mollis

These deciduous plants are welcomed in among your evergreen shrubs for their large colorful blossoms in May and also for their autumn-tinted foliage in the fall. Very hardy. May be planted in full sun. No color designation because Azalea Mollis are grown from seed.

Camellias

This season we have simplified our arrangement of the camellia listings. A check following any variety indicates sizes that are in stock.

These camellias are lath grown and will be sent immediately upon receiving order. In the event we are out of the exact size ordered, we may substitute size but not variety unless suggested by the customer.

Williamsii Hybrids

These award winning British camellias are known for their free flowering habit, their hardiness to zero temperatures, and this unique characteristic—the blossoms will fall when mature. The plants are never marred by faded flowers. Buds will appear in profusion, even on small plants, at the terminal points and also along the central stems. They open successively over a long period of several months. These camellias are easy to grow and shape themselves well. They adapt themselves to espaliering readily.

Camellia J. C. Williams is full pink in bud and pale rose-pink when expanded. The petals, generally 6 to 8, each wavy and notched in the center, open widely to about four inches across and are centered with a tuft of prominent yellow stamens. The foliage is small and narrow.

Equally desirable Mary Christian is a deeper, brighter rose-pink. Its buds are beautifully long and pointed. In form the blossoms are similar to J. C. Williams, but remain more cup shaped when open. Petals may be fewer, neither as prominently notched nor as wavy. Begins to bloom in December.

DWARF RHODODENDRONS

The following rhododendrons are suitable for planting in rock gardens where space is limited. These plants are low and compact in habit of growth and usually grow less than a few inches a year. In the modern type home where windows extend from the eaves to a few inches of the ground, this type of plant is most desirable.
